

Stuart Beatty, Pharm.D., BCACP, FAPhA

Stuart Beatty has more than 15 years of experience serving patients, teaching students, authoring papers, conducting research, and delivering presentations in the areas of ambulatory care clinical practice and management. He is Associate Professor of Clinical Pharmacy for the Ohio State University College of Pharmacy, Director of Strategy and Practice Transformation at the Ohio Pharmacists Association, President of Strategic Pharmacy Initiatives, LLC, and Founder of The Pharmacist Provider. Stuart was the first pharmacist to practice within the OSU General Internal Medicine clinics, where he develops pharmacy services, educates medical residents and student pharmacists, and has trained over 20 pharmacy residents. His expertise includes all aspects of ambulatory clinical and operational practice, including billing for services, pharmacist involvement in the medical home, pay-for-performance incentives, population health and outcomes, transitions of care operations, and justification of pharmacists in team-based care. Stuart has also been leading Ohio's provider status implementation efforts in partnership with the Ohio Pharmacists Association. He has used his experience in primary care transformation to engage with payors, health systems, physician practices, and community-based-practitioner clients to have pharmacists paid for clinical services in health-system, FQHC, and community settings. He has written publications and given numerous presentations on the importance of pharmacist-provided care aligning with clinical initiatives and value-based payment models.

Stuart earned his Pharm.D., with Distinction, from the Ohio Northern University Raabe College of Pharmacy in Ada, Ohio. He is a Board-Certified Ambulatory Care Pharmacist and a Fellow of the American Pharmacists Association.
